Hi, I'm Andrew!

AUTHOR, WRITER, COACH & MULTI-HYPHANTE ARTIST-PRENEUR

Storytelling has been my life force for as long as I have the ability to recall.

From my affinity for Julie Andrew's sharp wit as Mary Poppins at just 5 years old, to falling in love with theater as Alfalfa in a backyard summer camp production of The Little Rascals at 8, or to seeing the New York City skyline in cinema as I grew up and feeling a deep calling to lay down roots and dream here someday.

Story is how we connect.

Story is how we heal.

Story is the legacy we leave.

I call myself an artist-prenuer because I believe that I am in the business of creativity. Creativity is meant to be discovered, harnessed and freed so that you can share it to help make this life make a bit more sense each day.

I hear story and tell story wherever I go—whether that be my newest writing project, my current coaching client, my Broadway national tour, a colleague who found their voice in my first publication, a struggling artist who leans on our resources, or being inside the ever-changing trenches of my one of a kind 9-5.

Story is the result of a life lived to its fullest. My mission with my story is to create space wherever I go.

Big dreams.

Big moves.

Big love.

Andrew

Founder & Executive Director

In an industry of endings where do creatives go when the job ends? Or when the show closes?

Norlen founded his non-profit, Braving the Business in 2022 because of this very dilemma. He was driven to build an organization and cultivate a community that didn't have an expiration date.

Creatives of all kinds deserve a soft place to land at any stage of their careers, right?

This is why Andrew and his incredible Board of Directors are working towards opening Recess: the creatives wellness & community center—a first-of-its-kind resource for all artists located in midtown Manhattan.
